European Union-Global climate Change Alliance Project (USP-EU GCCA)-

its main purpose is to develop and strengthen the Pacific ACP countries' capacity to adapt to the impacts of climate change. This objective will be achieved through the training of national and regional experts on climate change and adaptation as well as the development and implementation of sustainable strategies for community adaptation to climate change, based on improved understanding of impacts of climate change and variability in the Pacific region.

ECCA-

This project helps rural communities to adapt to climate change, but as the communities and USP are both 'learning by doing', is also research project. The major emphasis of the first phase was on the implementation of cost effective adaptation options in water and coastal sectors in six village communities in Fiji. It has been jointly implemented by USP's PACE-SD and Institute of Applied Science that started during the second half of 2006. The project is funded by the Australian Agency for International Development (AusAID). In June 2010, AusAID announced that it will put in additional funds "for over the three years to ensure the continuation of the CCA which began in 2006". This project began its second phase in July 2010, and will replicate similar project activities to those of the first in six other village communities in Fiji.

EV414-Climate Change: Impacts, Vulnerability and Adaptation

This postgraduate course examines the risks posed to Pacific Islands by Climate Change and reviews the adaptation strategies to deal with those risks, both at national and community levels. The course is intended for people in the Pacific islands involved with medium-to-long term planning for natural resources, economic and social development, and/or the natural environment, especially graduates working in governments or NGOs who are not yet familiar with climate related issues but need to be so.
